Being Human always points to something or someone other than the self; be it a service to fulfill or another Human Being to encounter. We can discover Meaning in three ways: selflessly creating a work or doing a deed, humbly experiencing something or someone, and courageously immersing ourselves in suffering. By experiencing another Human Being in his very uniqueness, we Love him. The Loving person enables the Beloved to actualize the traits the Lover Sees. By making the Beloved aware of what she can Be and of what she can Become, the Lover's Love makes these potentialities come true. We may also find Meaning in Life even in hopelessness. For our suffering ceases to be suffering the moment it finds a meaning; such as the meaning in sacrificing for another." ~ Victor Frankel
